

Together we are changing Children's Social Work in Aberdeen

If you, like us, believe families in need are the number one priority, then we want to hear from you today.

"I applied for the post of consultant social worker in Aberdeen ... and the move for me has been very positive. The quality of my working and home life has improved since the move."

Anne Salariya, Consultant Social Worker, Aberdeen City Council

Aberdeen is a great place to live, work and visit and an even better place to be a social worker. The Reclaiming Social Work model – the first in Scotland - is a whole system redesign of social work services for families in need in Aberdeen. Social work employees play a crucial part in helping and supporting families in need and we want to make sure that they are free to focus on this work.

To achieve this we have redesigned our service into systemic Social Work Units as well as providing training in systemic practice for all our staff.

We have opportunities for:

- Consultant Social Workers
- Team Managers
- Clinical Practitioners
- Social Workers

We offer great pay and incentives, excellent training and a great place to live.

Our offer includes:

- Competitive salary
- A work-life balance – manageable caseloads and flexible working options
- Continuing professional development opportunities including systemic practice training
- Relocation package up to £7500
- access to affordable accommodation
- Travel costs
- Employee benefits package including a discount scheme at a wide range of retailers

If this sounds like the sort of challenge you are looking for, please get in touch and be part of this new way of working.

Together we are
Reclaiming
SOCIALWORK

"I have found that the families we are working with are responding more favourably to our new social work model. As a consultant social worker in a social work unit I would struggle to go back to the traditional model of social work."

Adam Keenan, Consultant Social Worker, Aberdeen City Council
